

A program is an executable file

It contains machine code instructions to tell the computer what to do when it is run

The program's file will exist on your computer's disk

The file is loaded into memory before it can start executing